Freshmen Orientation

In the sweltering August sun and intense Indiana humidity, 284 bright-eyed medical students gathered on the I.U. Medical Center campus for orientation in 1989. Unaware of the many obstacles that lie ahead, we assembled in alphabetical order to meet our mentors. The Medical School Class of 1993 would soon disperse to 8 different regional campuses and the Indy campus to begin their basic science education. The class would not assemble en masse again until National Boards Part I in June of 1991. New friendships were quickly formed as the class purchased their books and headed to their first lecture.

Nestled in the picturesque setting of Gary, Indiana, 16 students found themselves spending (serving?) their first two years of medical school learning the basic sciences and basic survival skills. Aside from being under the iron fist of Dr. "My-students-get-the-lowest-grades-and-highest-board-scores" Iatridis, the students also faced the daily violence, mayhem, and gunfire of this "Escape from New York" atmosphere.

Foreign Experiences

Every year seniors at I.U. Medical School venture outside the United States and complete fourth year rotations in a third world country. The Class of '93 was no exception. Several fourth year students travelled to the four corners of the world to learn medicine and surgery, as well as provide some much-needed assistance for the needy. Most people spent two to three months serving in places such as Mozambique, Kenya, Thailand, and New Zealand. Other seniors did rotations in the U.S. on Indian reservations and in the inner city. Everyone agreed that the experience was invaluable.

Rob Holt drives around a defender as the Class of '93 eliminates the Class of '94.

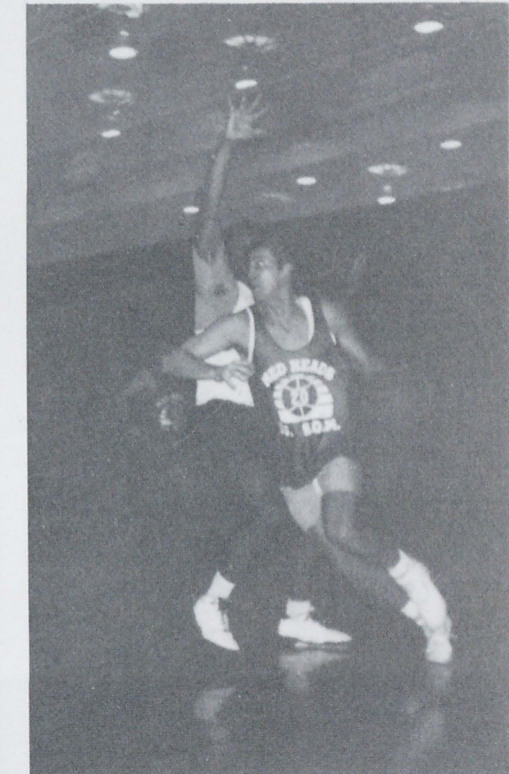

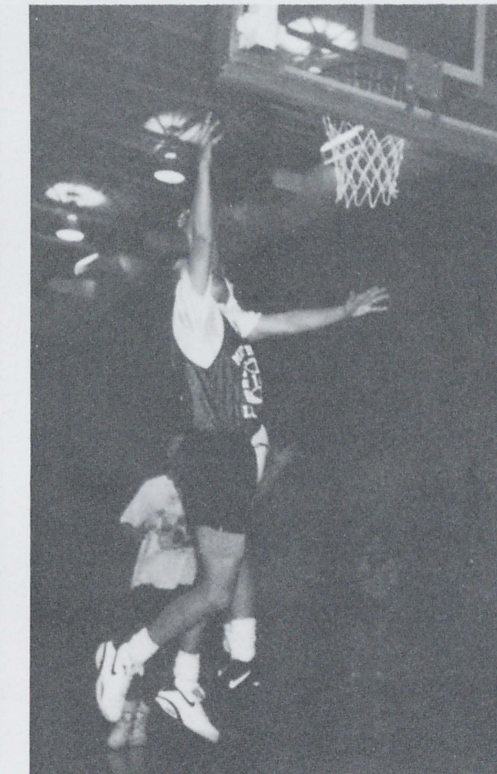

The Class of '93 was very active in intramural sports at IUPUI for four years. Teams in flag football, basketball, and volleyball excelled both in regular season and tournament play. The championship game often pitted the class's "A team," the Medheads, against a law school or dental school team. Highlights included the MS III volleyball team's 3 hour semi-finals match against the I.U. Law School Amazons, the MS IV basketball squad's 2-point loss in the final game, and the MS II football Medheads' undefeated regular season. Only final exams kept the team from a trip to the Sugar Bowl Halftime national flag football championships. Sports were a great vehicle for blowing off steam and building friendships.

Paraphilia Party I & II

The paraphilia parties were just one of the many social functions that allowed the wild and the worried to release their inhibitions. Exhibitionists, cross-dressers, froettuers, and a doministrix partied to the wee hours of the morning. For two nights, the normally mundane revealed their deepest secrets and became "sexual adventurers".

The Freshmen Review was one of the highlights of the first two years at Indianapolis. It is an annual tradition when the MS II's pan the professors in a skit-spoof for the MS I's. The Class of '93 spent over a month planning for the gala event. It was a chance for the class to display some of their hidden musical, acting, and other talents, as well as blow off some steam.

Senior Banquet

Guest speaker, Dr. Otis Bowen, addresses the class and their guests after dinner. He spoke on the future of medicine, emphasizing primary care fields.

With the exception of graduation, the Senior Banquet was the highlight of the senior year of medical school. Two weeks before graduation, the Class of '93 assembled at the Indianapolis Roof Ballroom for dinner, entertainment, and the class awards. Faculty and students received accolades for their achievements. Dr. Brian O'Connor won the Golden Apple Award for outstanding professor. Dr. Otis Bowen, former Governor of Indiana and family physician, was greatly enjoyed as the guest speaker. The night concluded with music and dancing.

Moshe David Engel

Dear Moshe — When we named you Moshe David, and later you became a structural civil engineer at Purdue University, we did not foresee that you would become M.D. Engel, M.D. Our family is very proud of you for choosing medicine as another professional way of serving others. We look forward to your continuing to live as a committed mensch with high ideals and your priorities in the proper order. We hope and pray that in your new career in medicine you and your classmates emulate another Moshe, the twelfth century physician, teacher, philosopher, writer, and counselor, Rabbi Moses Ben Maimon, known as Maimonides. We wish you and your classmates all the best, success, and happiness in your chosen field of medicine and in life. With much love and admiration, Abba and Ima.

↑ Congratulations, ↑
Class Of '93!

MidWest Medical Center wants to take this opportunity to congratulate each and every person of the 1993 Indiana University School of Medicine's graduating class.

Congratulations are not only in order, they're well deserved. No one knows better than you what it took to get this far: the obstacles, the challenges and the dedication. And now, as you're beginning to reap some of the rewards, it's time to consider the next step.

At MidWest Medical Center, we're not only a leader in the healthcare field with a clear vision of the future and an action plan to get there, but we're also dedicated to our on-going mission: to serve the community and to serve the people who work here with support, autonomy and possibilities.

Gulf war explodes

Operation Desert Storm begins

City confronts a war far away

Residents pray for quick success but question why we had to fight

Indianapolis, Ind. (UPI) — As the United States launched its military offensive against Iraq, many in Indianapolis expressed a mix of relief and concern. While some welcomed the action as a necessary response to the crisis in the Persian Gulf, others questioned the need for war and the potential impact on the city.

At the Indiana State Capitol, a group of citizens gathered to pray for the success of the military operation. A sign held by one of the participants read "PRAY FOR PEACE".

Mayor Richard Lugar, in a statement, expressed his support for the President's decision while also emphasizing the importance of maintaining peace and stability in the region.

U.S. unleashes air attack on Iraq

President Bush ordered a massive air attack on Iraq.

'We will not fail,' Bush says

President Bush, in a televised address, said the United States would not fail in its mission to liberate Kuwait. He vowed that the coalition forces would continue to fight until Iraq withdrew its troops from the Gulf region.

The President's speech was met with a standing ovation in the White House. He emphasized the unity of the American people and the support of coalition partners in the operation.

Operation Desert Storm

The military operation, known as Operation Desert Storm, began with a massive air assault on Iraqi military targets. The coalition forces, led by the United States, aimed to cripple Iraq's ability to wage war.

As the operation unfolded, the Pentagon reported significant damage to Iraqi infrastructure and military assets. The coalition forces continued to push for a swift resolution to the conflict.

Congress gives OK for war

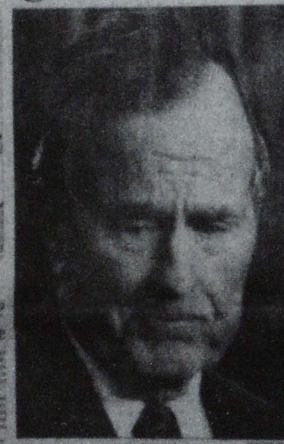

The Plan

Air strike likely, but what next? Much hinges on Iraqi response

As the United States and its coalition partners prepared for a potential conflict with Iraq, the focus shifted to the Persian Gulf. The Pentagon outlined a plan for a swift and decisive military operation to liberate Kuwait.

The plan involved a massive air assault on Iraqi military targets, followed by a ground offensive if necessary. The coalition forces aimed to cripple Iraq's ability to wage war and force a withdrawal from the Gulf region.

Bush grateful for 'last, best' peace chance

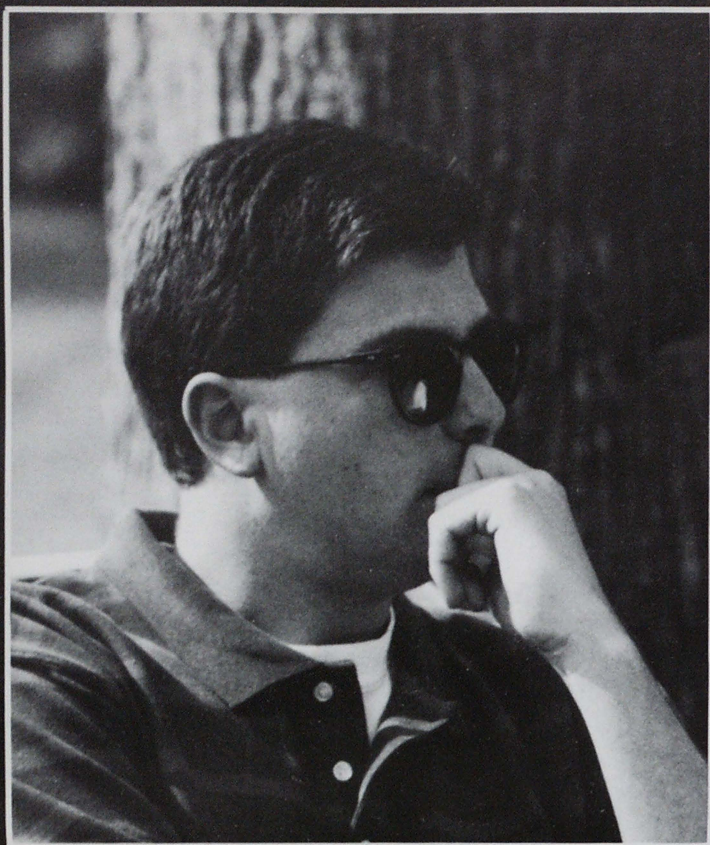

President Bush expressed his gratitude for the opportunity to resolve the crisis in the Persian Gulf through peaceful means. He stated that the United States would continue to seek a diplomatic solution while being prepared for military action.

The President's statement was seen as a sign of his commitment to peace and stability in the region. He emphasized the importance of maintaining the integrity of international law and the sovereignty of all nations.

As the situation in the Persian Gulf evolved, the United States and its coalition partners remained vigilant. The Pentagon reported that Iraq's military movements were being closely monitored, and the coalition forces were ready to respond to any escalation of the conflict.

The President's leadership and the support of the American people were crucial in the operation. He vowed that the United States would not fail in its mission to liberate Kuwait and restore peace to the region.
